A SMILE

A smile costs nothing, but gives much. It enriches those who receive, without making poorer those who give. It takes but a moment, but the memory of it sometimes lasts forever. None is so rich or mighty that he can get along without it, and none is so poor but that he can be enriched by it.

A smile creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in business, and it is the countersign of a friendship. It brings rest to the weary, cheer to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and it's nature's best antidote for trouble. Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen. It is something of no value to anyone until it is given away.

Some people are too tired to give a smile; give them one of yours, for none needs a smile so much as he who has no more to give.

CANNIBALISM

Almost everyone has heard of cannibalism, but few know its true history.

It began as a religious practice. East Indians paid tribute to their parents by eating them. This was based on the primitive belief that a man had the spirit of whatever he ate. Therefore the parent was eaten as a great tribute to him. Some tribe members ate lion meat for bravery and deer for speed.

Another belief is based on the satisfaction of ancient gods. Criminals of some tribes were sacrificed to please the gods. The primitive rule that a sacrifice must be tasted or eaten by the priest offering it is not broken even when the sacrifice is human flesh.

For the most part this practice has been stamped out by strict governmental supervision of foreign possessions.

POLAR BEARS

The first of these groups and the most northern in distribution includes only the great white "polar" or "ice" bear of the Arctic. Its elongated body, long, pointed head, relatively slender limbs, large, hairy-soled feet and cream white coat are unlike the features of any other. Large specimens are 9 feet or more in length and have enormous strength. These bears are numerous throughout the icy regions around the North Pole, and wander great distances away from the coast on the ice, sometimes swimming many miles. They live mainly on seals, young walrus and fish, which they catch in the coast rivers where they come to breed. The writings of Arctic explorers tell of this widespread species and should be read by those who wish to know more about them.

EARTHWORMS

Have you ever thought about what strange creatures earthworms are?

There are different kinds of earthworms. Most of us are familiar with the common variety, which boys use for fish bait. Then there is a kind that is small and white. People raise them to feed their aquarium fish. Another common kind is the "stinking worm", so named because of its bad odor. It has red and yellow rings around it. In Australia and South America there are giant earthworms. Some of these grow to be seven feet long.

If you want to get a worm out of his hole without breaking him, you can take a tip from the robin. He knows how to do it. He knows that if he pulls too hard the worm will break and he may lose part of his dinner. He uses a slow, steady pull. Earthworms have small, stiff bristles on the front and sides of their bodies. When a bird tries to pull him out these bristles cling to the sides of his hole. But if he keeps on pulling, the worm will finally get tired and let go.

Earthworms are great diggers. They can make their holes or burrows in two different ways. One way is to poke their heads hard against the ground and make their hole big pushing the dirt aside. They can only do this in soft earth. The other way is for them to eat their way into the ground. So at the same time they make their hole and get their food.

Now, the next time you come across an earthworm, you can study him closely and see how he does these things.

CADET

A BIKE SPEEDOMETER THIS CHRISTMAS

is worth asking for!

TEAR OUT THIS PAGE AND LEAVE IT:

- in one of Dad's slippers
- on Mom's dresser
- on the family bulletin board
- mail it to Dad at your house

Let people know you want a CADET bike speedometer for Christmas. It will add miles of fun to your cycling and it's priced to please your parents and relatives! The CADET is an accurate, precision instrument, like the speedometer in the family car. Its big, easy-to-read dial shows speeds to 50 miles per hour—distance to 10,000 miles. Handsome streamlined case is shockproof and weatherproof. And the American-made CADET fits any bike!

Give your folks or your favorite uncle this "hint" now...for a CADET bike speedometer this Christmas! It's the gift you'll enjoy month after month...mile after mile!

P.S. Merry Christmas from
